BLACKBURN.

For several years past we have not been unsuccessful in securing points at Ewood Park, and on Saturday last were not without hope of being able to repeat the victory of last year on the same ground. We were able to put on the field ten of the eleven men who had played so well in our previous matches, Sturgess taking the place of Smith, who was injured. The Rovers were at full strength, and included not only Simpson, but Chapman at centre-half, whom they secured from Glasgow Rangers at a very big figure, and whose question of transfer is being inquired into by the Management Committee of the League. The match needs very little describing, as the defence on both sides was master of the situation practically all through the game.

Our forwards were very weak in front of goal, and in this respect the Rovers' forwards, with one exception, were very little if any better, and it was exasperating to find grand movements in mid-field absolutely spoiled by the finishing work when near goal. The inside forwards of both teams failed to take advantage of openings of the wing men, by shooting at the first opportunity, and would endeavour to manoeuvre, after beating one man, for a better position, only to be beaten by the defence crowding upon them. Many an opportunity was thus lost.

It was a game in which the goalkeepers had very little to do, neither goalkeeper having what could be called a good shot to stop. The goal that was scored was a beauty after having been well worked for, whilst on another occasion the upright was hit—this about exhausted the really dangerous shots Lievesley had to negotiate, whilst at the other end, Robinson, was clearly beaten by a centre from Evans, which came so swift across that it was missed entirely by the right wing, and the other was a header from a centre by Connor, which went right across the goal and out at the far post.

Our advice to our forwards is to shoot often when in a favourable position and not allow the defence to consolidate, as was often the case last Saturday.

WEDNESDAY.

It would seem almost superfluous to attempt to write much about our neighbours for a Sheffield crowd to read. Their doings are too well known by all lovers of football to need any recounting. Yet we may perhaps be forgiven for briefly touching upon one or two points in connection with them.

As was the case last season, Wednesday have made a very poor start. And even with two months of the season already over, they are in a somewhat lowly position, and one that will need all their best efforts to improve upon. Yet we cannot term them a poor side, for they have given proof on more than one occasion already, that they know what to do and how to do it. That knowledge, however, unless accompanied by the fact that they get points, is of little consolation to their supporters, who are doubtless beginning to get down-hearted at their team's continued run of non-success at Owlerton.

Wednesday have played five games at home, and have registered but one win—a wonderful change to that which used to be the case with them. At one period they could usually be relied upon to win on their own domain, and few teams came to play them who did not leave a couple of points to enrich the Owlerton "bag." However, they are not the only side to disappoint in home engagements, and the present season has already witnessed more sensational home defeats for clubs than would occur during the whole of some tourneys.

Their meritorious defeat of Aston Villa a fortnight ago appears to have been well deserved. Thus most people expected they had really come into their stride, and would give as good an account of themselves as was the case during the latter part of last season. It will no doubt be re-called that for the first half of their engagements they earned but fourteen points, and were next to the bottom position in the League table. Yet for the remaining nineteen games they earned just twice that number of points, viz., 28, making 42 for the whole season, and landing them into sixth position in the table.

Last week, however, with Newcastle as their visitors, they again disappointed their followers, and the Northerners, playing brilliant football, conquered our neighbours, who could not withstand the well planned and scientific onslaughts made upon their citadel. It may be some little consolation to know that on last week's form, Newcastle would have mastered almost any team in the League.

When we met Wednesday in the Charity Match on October 2nd, our men were easily the better team, and the score of two goals to nil in our favour does not by any means flatter our side. But we must not take that game as any criterion of form for to-day's engagement, although our men can be relied upon to leave nothing to chance. We lost both League games to Wednesday last season, in addition to the Charity Match. Moreover our forwards were unable to register a single goal in the whole three matches.

For to-day's game we are content to await the result, feeling confidence in our team to do their part to make our position in the League a little brighter. The rank bad luck that has dogged our footsteps in recent matches will not always stick to us, and we only need to have just ordinary good luck to give us a much more honourable position amongst clubs.
